MEMORIAL DAY CELEBRATION

CONGRESSMAN GARDNER DELIVERS PATRIOTIC ADDRESS.

The Town Has the Usual Crowd of People and Streets full of Autos.

Memorial Day looked threatening but the rain did not come and there was on hand the usual crowd and streets were filled with automobiles and teams. The trains did not bring the crowds this year. About 3000 excursionists come over the railroad but every road into Gettysburg saw hundreds of automobiles touring this way and the people in the autos made up for the people who did not come on the trains.

The memorial services began on Sunday, when at the impressive meeting in Corporal Skelly Post room the muffled drum was rolled for each veteran of the Post who had died during the year, as follows:

Jacob Eckert, who served in Company F, 8th Regiment, Pennsylvania Infantry. Died July 3, 1915.

Alexander M. Walker, past commander Quartermaster Sergeant of Company C, 1st Battalion Maryland Cavalry. Died October 6, 1915.

Rev. H. M. Minnigh, captain Company K, 1st Pennsylvania Reserves. Died November 27, 1915.

Elias Dillfield, a member of Company B, 9th Pennsylvania Cavalry. Died December 11, 1915.

Emanuel Smith, a member of Company A, 18th Regiment Pennsylvania Infantry. Died December 28, 1915.

Henry M. Shaffer, a member of Company L, 152nd Regiment Pennsylvania Infantry or 3d Heavy Artillery. Died January 8, 1916.

William T. Zeigler, commander of the Post. A member of Company F, 8th Pennsylvania Infantry. Died March 6, 1916.

Charles Robinson, a member of Company B, 3d New Jersey Volunteers. Died March 9, 1916.

Nicholas L. Wierman, past commander of the Post; corporal in Company K, 16th Regiment Pennsylvania Infantry, and a member of Co. B, 108th Pennsylvania Infantry. Died May 14, 1916.

Rev. W. R. Glen delivered the sermon at the services taking his text from 2 Tim. 2-3, "Thou therefore endure hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ," and among other things said:

"Endure hardness. What memories those words must bring to you veteran soldiers! To some of the soldiers the war meant bitter separations; to some it meant sore wounds; to some, imprisonments; to some, blasted health; to some, death. It meant the hardness of the battlefield on which men fought and died for the ascendancy. It meant the hardness of the hospital, more men died from disease than from bullets. It meant the hardness of the prisons, Andersonville and Libby, which were often worse than death.

"Endure hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ. Have you ever thought of Jesus as a soldier? Our ordinary conception of Jesus is as a man of peace. We think of Him not wounding, but healing; not killing, but making alive. Jesus was a strong, courageous, manly man. In his life were exemplified the soldierly virtues. What shall we say they are? You men, who fought and bled, what will you say are the supreme virtues of the soldier? Are they not self-sacrifice, obedience, courage, and magnanimity? All of these in their highest and best degree are found in the life of Jesus.

"As years recede out of the darkness and bitterness and hatred that gathered about the Civil War, there emerges a single figure, towering above all the others as the mountain peak towers above the hills. Above the courageous Jackson, the valiant Lee, the dashing Sheridan, the rock-like Grant, high above them all, rises the form of the martyr Lincoln, the man of sorrow, the friend of humanity, a follower of the Christ. He was sacrificing to the point of laying down his life, he was obedient to the Divine will, with great courage he faced the issues of the day, with true magnanimity he bore malice toward none but had charity for all.

The Grammar School orchestra and Glee Club furnished the music for the occasion.

The graves of veterans in the Catholic Cemetery were decorated Sunday evening. The procession started from the church, and religious and patriotic hymns were sung on the way to the cemetery. The address was delivered by Rev. Father Geale of Baltimore on "Patriotism and Preparedness." At a later service in St. Francis Xavier Church, following the May procession and the crowning of the State of the Blessed Virgin by Little Miss Knox. Father Geale preached the sermon.

In the Presbyterian Church elaborately decorated with the National colors, in the evening, a special service was held with sermon by Rev. F. E. Taylor.

The Parade

The parade of two divisions was marshalled by Wm. McG. Tawney, and his aides Morris Stansbury, Lawrence Oyler, Roy Zinn and Ralph Wierman. The Citizens' Band was followed by the Sons of Veterans from New Oxford and Gettysburg. The second division marshalled by C. O. Myers was led by the Biglerville band, Gettysburg O. of I. A. followed and members of the G. A. R. and guests in automobiles. The school children joined the procession at High Street. The strewing of the flowers was witnessed by a large throng and the tributes scattered by the little ones from six years old up to the grey haired veteran carried the message as perennially fresh and beautiful as the flowers of spring.

At the rostrum the services previously outlined were held and Congressman Augustus P. Gardner of Massachusetts delivered the address.

"Happy is the nation which has no history." So runs the old proverb. Perhaps the saying is not untrue; but do you not know that a higher and a nobler happiness is the lot of the nation which has a pure and a glorious history, even though the page be stained with tears?

"The calm level of peace has indeed its victories; but it is only in the furnace of war that nations are tried and tempered. It is only through the storm that the highest blessings of peace are attained.

In the cloistered seclusion of the study men of letters may dream that the day is already at hand when mankind will at last beat its useless swords into ploughshares and then the awful roar of battle will be heard no more. My friends, the dawn of such a day is still afar off. Kings may no longer rise against Kings in defiance of their people's wishes; but nations will rise against nations just so long as the wishes and rights and hatreds of one part of the earth conflict with the wishes and rights and hatreds of another part of the earth.

"May the Lord defend this nation from pestilence and from war; but let our martial spirit live unstilled. Gentlemen will continue to cry, 'Peace, peace,' as gentlemen have always cried 'Peace, peace,' but for all that, let us instill into the hearts of our children the enthusiasm which we share in the magnificence of the struggle of our greatest war.

An easy and a pleasant duty after all it is to keep alive the memory of your deeds. Should the entire world devote itself to the task of eradicating the martial spirit in man, should statues and treaties endeavor to stifle the pride of the people in your heroism, in vain would be the effort.

"The strongest motive known to man is the instinct to preserve himself. The greatest task which man must face is the struggle against that instinct. The greatest victory which man can attain, in war or in peace, in battle, in shipwreck or in earthquake, when the time of his trial comes, is the overthrow of nature's strongest impulse. To follow the command of his manhood into the teeth of danger, while his poor mortal body trembles with fear which his immortal soul has subdued;—that is the awful trial set before the soldier and the man.

"So long as woman crowns the brave with laurel, so long as contempt of death kindles our admiration, just so long will your memory be kept green in the hearts of your countrymen and the plaintive mutterings of the peaceful compromiser will fall on inattentive ears.

On the sweltering farm of the western prairie, under the giant chimney of the New England factory, in the subterranean gallery of the Pennsylvania mine, everywhere in this broad land where Union hearts are found, a pause has come to-day. Men and women and children are gathered together to do you honor and with you to do honor to your comrades who have gone before.

"Other nations, barbaric and civilized alike, since the dawn of history, have exalted the memory of their chieftains slain in their country's service. Kings and Princes, Generals and Admirals, all have been honored by stiered urn and marble pillar. It has remained for this nation to decorate the grave of the plain soldier, of each soldier individually as he lies forever in his narrow cell. Granite and brass and marble endure though flowers perish. They perish indeed, but year after year they are renewed by gentle loving hands, while the sculptured urn in the great cathedral is forgotten or serves at most to awaken a moment's wonder as the traveller passes by.

"For most Americans the Civil war is only history or at best a confused and faint recollection. For you soldiers it is a living memory and in that memory on MEMORIAL DAY we of the younger generation try to join.

We dream of ourselves at your side when Lincoln told you that your country was in danger, when the call came for men, when the latent patriotism of the country caught fire amid the rolling of drums, the echoing of bugles and the billowing of flags. In our imagining we think of you as you scrutinized your hearts while you listened to the inspiring words at the war meetings. How searching was the examination to which each one of you subjected himself! 'Shall I be brave on the stricken field or will my spirit give way and my name be disgraced? Have I the right to leave my young wife and my children or the girl whom I love and who loves me? What will become of my beloved if I fall? Will a grateful country protect them or will a bankrupt nation turn to them with words of thanks and empty hands?'

"And so you took counsel with your women and they bid you follow the trumpet which shall never sound retreat. The answer went out: 'WE ARE COMING, FATHER ABRAHAM.'

"Here where I gaze is Cemetery Ridge where stood you Union Soldiers who repelled the grim assault of Pickett. Before us lie the open fields stretching far away, open fields which those bold rebels crossed, falling at every step, and I wonder, yet, I wonder as I stand here, whether the men of my generation and of the generations to come could charge as bravely as the Grey, or resist so staunchly as the Blue.

"Were they of different clay from you, those men who charged our lines that hot July day? They were of the same clay as you men who withstood them here at Gettysburg only in turn to charge them just as gallantly at the Bloody Salient of the Spottsylvania lines. Balaclava is worthy of its place in song and story, a noble charge of a handful of cavalry; but the historian of the future will hardly compare it with the assault of half the Confederate Army at Gettysburg nor with the assault of Hancock and Wright on Spottsylvania's bloody field.

"To you who have survived those perilous war times may the Lord grant a ripe fullness of years. While you are still with us the nation owes you more than can be gauged by any pension scale. Though after a fashion a grateful Republic may be able to show its good will to the living, to the dead we owe a debt which must ever remain unpaid. Three hundred thousand Union Soldiers did not live to see the dawn of peace. Three hundred thousand gallant men were called to their eternal reward before their fellow-countrymen could show their love and gratitude.

"I would that every soldier of that noble host slumbered today in hallowed ground where tender hands could deck his grave with garlands. But no, many and many a tortured body found its last resting place in the blood-soaked earth of some southern field. Many a soul ascended to its Maker amid the wrecks of war, leaving its mortal shell to be interred by friend or foe as chance would have it. Over those nameless graves no flowers can be scattered by loving hands today and only nature knows which wild flowers bloom the brighter springing from honored turf where soldiers lie at peace.

But where we may, year after year, old and young will gather with flowers to strew on the graves of your departed comrades. Listen to the words of the poet:

'Cover them over with beautiful flowers:

Deck them with garlands, those brothers of ours:

Lying so silent by night and by day, Sleeping the years of their manhood away:

Years they had marked for the joys of the brave,

Years they must waste in the sloth of the grave.

All the bright laurels that promised to bloom

Fall to the earth when they went to their tomb.

Give them the need they have won in the past,

Give them the honors their merits forecast;

Give them the chaplets they won in the strife,

Give them the laurels they lost with their life.

Cover them over—yes, cover them over—

Parent and husband and brother and lover;

Crown in your heart these heroes of ours,

And cover them over with beautiful flowers!

"Year by year the ranks of those in front of you have thinned as the Grand Army of the Republic marches towards the setting sun. For many of you, alas, the day is far spent and even now you find yourself in sight of the eternal rifle pits beyond. Slowly but surely moves the long column. Slowly but surely the youngest veteran marches to the front.

"A day will come when all of you have passed the gates; but while this nation which you saved survives, while men and women call themselves your countrymen, the memory of your deeds and lives shall never dim with time."

The German societies that are sending protests to Congress against a rupture with Germany might promote peace equally well by sending protests to Berlin against a rupture with America.

PLAYGROUND OPENING DAY

Our Great Child Welfare Day Thursday, June 8th.

The Kurtz Memorial Playground will have Opening Day on Thursday of next week, June 8th and every one interested in Childhood should be there. It is a day when every one should be glad to stop the routine of life and give time to the most valuable asset of any community—the children. Seeing the children safe and happy at play will recall the dust and danger of the play of the street, the only playground the adult population had in their childhood, and the benefit and safety the playground is to the children of the town. You will better understand the playground feature of their lives, if you will attend opening day and see the children at their healthy, happy play and recreation, safe from the dust and autos of the streets that endanger their lives. The stores will close about 5 P. M. and everybody will go to the playground, so go along with everybody, and have a good time. There will be all kinds of games and sports by the children. There will be amusements for all the children from the tots upward. Come and stay until dark and the opening is over. There will be coffee and refreshments. The entire proceeds will go toward the maintenance of the playground for the children of the town. Come out and see the happiness of the children and then be happy yourself.

COMMENCEMENT

The Gettysburg College Commencement Festivities start with the Pan-Hellenic Dance Friday evening. Commencement is going to attract unusual attention with a baccalaureate by Governor Brumbaugh and address by Chief Justice Brown. There will be unusual interest taken by every alumnus in the meeting of the Board of Trustees on Tuesday, when five vacancies in professorships will be acted upon. The chair of Mathematics vacant by reason of death of Prof. H. B. Nixon, and the chair of English Bible vacant by reason of the resignation of Dr. A. R. Wentz, who has been elected to professorship in the Seminary will be filled. Prof. H. R. Shepherd, of the English department will hand in his resignation to accept a professorship in the University of Cincinnati. Prof. C. H. Behle, assistant in German and French and Prof. G. L. Reinert, assistant in the Engineering department will not return and their successors will come up for consideration. The former goes to the Cheltenham High School and the latter to engage in engineering operations.

NEW READING SCHEDULE

The new schedule on Philadelphia and Reading railroad makes two slight changes. The train that has been leaving Gettysburg at 11 a. m. will go at 10:55 and one arriving at 1:45 will not reach here until 2 p. m.

GOOD WORK OF FIRE CO.

The Gettysburg Fire Company demonstrated the efficiency of their fire fighting abilities early last Sunday morning, when the dwelling on West Middle Street, owned by David Irvin and tenanted by Blaine Kitzmiller was found on fire. The fire broke out between one and two o'clock a time when it is difficult to get quick response. The engine was not working with its usual force. The water pressure was good and the firemen went at their work intelligently and the dwelling then burning briskly and standing in a row of seven weatherboard dwellings was quickly brought under control.

The fire broke out at a rear chimney and there had been a wood fire in the stove using the chimney during the day. The smoke awakened the family and Mr. Kitzmiller was able to get his wife, three weeks old baby and other young children to a place of safety in time. Some clothing was saved, but a bed and a crib in rear part of house was burned. The adjoining property of Mrs. Charles Gilbert was on fire several times but the good work of the Fire Company prevented a spread of the flames. Loss of Mr. Irvin and Mr. Kitzmiller is covered by insurance.

STATE SUFFRAGE HEAD SAYS G. O. P. SHOULD AID CAUSE

Discusses Party Platform Plank Upon Eve of Leading Delegation to Chicago to Help Women's Demonstration

"THEIR CASE PROVED"

Believing that their past campaigns have demonstrated to men that the time has come for men themselves to enforce the granting of suffrage to women as well as all others, suffragists from all over the country to the number of 40,000, will parade in Chicago, June 7, to impress the delegates to the National Republican Convention with what they believe is the justice of inserting a woman suffrage plank in the platform. There will be 50 Pennsylvania women in the monster yellow and white line.

"Women of the East as well as those of the West," said Mrs. George B. Orady, of Huntingdon, president of the Pennsylvania Woman Suffrage Association, who will head the delegates from her state, "have fought a valiant fight for what practically all honest men know is just—the right to have a voice in the government that governs us. In Pennsylvania, normally a strong Republican state, we polled more than 385,000 votes last year. This means that practically each man voted favorably because he was acquainted with one or more women who desired to participate in the government. It is not excessive to say that these men actually knew, in the aggregate, 700,000 or more women in Pennsylvania who believe equal franchise is just and desirable.

"This being so, it would be logical for the Pennsylvania delegation to be a unit upon the inserting of a woman suffrage plank in their party platform. "Delegations from other states must know, cannot help knowing, that the same is true in their home sections. They cannot advance one reason why the thinking woman as well as the thinking man should not have a voice in making the laws she must obey.

"Republicans in state conventions have adopted such planks and there is no reason why the greater National body should not do likewise. "Really, this should now be a man's fight. Strong, earnest and honest men should rise with their opportunity, and force the adoption of a franchise for all. No party can believe in its previous platform and the precepts of justice and equality of its leaders without recognizing the American woman as a person entitled to every sort of freedom and equality. The time has come for men to act honestly and there are few honest men who do not recognize an equality of intelligence as well as social equality in women."

MORE ANTAGONISTS FOR UBIQUITOUS FLY

The ubiquitous fly will find another antagonist pitted against his kind this summer for the suffragists of the state have decided to enter the ranks of his swatters.

Armed with 10,000 swatters purchased by the state organization the first division of women to enroll will stand between the cradle and the pests invading their homes, the object being to protect children from disease.

Other swatters will be purchased in 10,000 lots, the suffragists say, until as many women as possible are armed with the exterminating instruments of the suffrage design.

At their last meeting, the executive board of the Pennsylvania Woman Suffrage Association, also arranged for the purchase of thousands of paper packets of matches to be distributed to men at county fairs. Those using the matches will note from the legend on the packets that "The More Light You Get On Woman Suffrage The Better It Looks."

NOW IS THE TIME FOR YELLOW POSY PLANTING

Reminded by the planting of the farmers and in keeping with other signs of the times, the suffragists announce that now is the season for all good housewives to begin planting suffrage flower beds.

Last year, there was a state-wide campaign to have the state dotted with plots of yellow flowers and hundreds of women purchased seeds from suffrage organizations, thereby helping the suffrage war fund and keeping the subject before added scores.

The seeds are assorted and done up in attractive yellow boxes. All the flowers, of course, are yellow. The general directions are: Fill the state with odors sweet, Golden Flowers that blaze in glee, With a heart that spurns defeat, Golden dawn till jubilee.

WASHINGTON COUNTY WOMEN AID WORKERS

Suffragists of Washington county have been given wide endorsement by the newspapers of the county and men in public office for their aid in making Good Roads' Day a success.

The suffrage volunteers offered to sell 9,000 buttons to finance the work of the day, the proceeds to be used to purchase materials, rent tools and provide luncheons and signs.

Girls, gay in suffrage sashes, sold the buttons at the busy corners of the towns and netted a goodly sum in donations ranging from 10-cent pieces to bank notes.

Last year, throughout the state, suffragists provided luncheons for the volunteers.

Because Women Needed Her. Miss Lilla Belle Hibben is the first woman prosecutor appointed in the United States. She was appointed in Los Angeles, California, by District Attorney Woolwine, because he believed that "There are many matters which women who come into the district attorney's office will talk over more freely with a woman than with a man."

THE ARCH OF CTESIPHON.

Lone Remnant of a Once Wonderful and Magnificent City.

Just below Bagdad, on the Tigris, there stands a wonderful ruin known as the Arch of Ctesiphon—all that remains today of a once mighty city, the one time capital of the Parthian Kingdom.

The ruins consist of an immense chamber, 81 feet wide by 154 feet long, with an arched roof in one single span of the whole width, the crown of the arch being 101 feet high. The edifice has a back, but in front is entirely open from top to bottom, displaying the whole of the magnificent vaulted chamber. On one side, at the same height as the arch, extends a kind of facade. The whole building is constructed of burnt bricks about a foot square, and it is supposed that the front was originally cased with marble.

Historical records show Ctesiphon was a second Babylon in point of size and in the splendor of its palaces and princely houses. When taken by the Romans 100,000 captives and a rich booty fell into their possession. Later it became the capital of Persia. Here Chosroes, the twenty-third king of Persia, lived in great style. His throne was in a palace of prodigious height and so vast that it was supported by 40,000 silver columns. Its roof was enriched with 1,000 golden globes, which all had different movements and represented the planets and the various constellations.

Some centuries later this wonderful palace and city were sacked by the Arabs, since when it has gradually decayed, all that remains today being this single arch—Wide World Magazine.

THE CULPRIT CAME BACK.

Because "Big Sim" Was Only a Sheriff and Not a Surveyor.

A Salt Lake City man tells this story of one "Big Sim," a deputy sheriff of Eureka, from whom no criminal could get away by the cross country method. Sim was familiar with every foot of ground in eastern Nevada and could outrun a coyote.

As deputy sheriff he engaged in several long chases, always with success. His capture of a horse thief known as "Spanish Abe" was the toast of Eureka for a long time.

This Spanish Abe was a "bad actor," who made it his business to appropriate stray cattle and the blooded mares of the neighborhood. With a companion he was finally rounded up and incarcerated in the Eureka jail. The next night, however, the criminals forced the window of their cell and took to the brush, mounted on the fleetest animals they could steal.

Big Sim, however, did not let the trail pursue. Spanish Abe turned toward Utah and was changing horses along the road. Big Sim, following his man, likewise and cutting across country, gained on the fugitives in the desert. Pursued and pursued he had been riding continuously, and the horses were giving way under the strain. But Big Sim kept on, and it was said he was a real Utah when he brought Spanish Abe and his companion upon a level with his gun and clapped on the handcuffs.

"You have no right to take us, Sim," the Mexican whined. "We are in Utah."

"Rate," Big Sim replied. "I ain't no surveyor. Come on."—Case and Comment.

A Stream of Water.

A high pressure jet of water will bowl over a man as easily as if he were a box of matches and leave him half stunned. It will even turn a bull from its path. Experiments have shown that a jet of water can be produced at such a high pressure that it becomes practically a bar of iron. Swords have been blunted in attempting to cut through these extra high pressure jets. Some years ago an armed thief attempted to hold up a rich official of the Bank of England in his private office. The official managed to get out of the room unharmed and locked the door. A resourceful attendant brought the fire hose. He opened the door sufficiently to insert the nozzle. In a few minutes the would-be thief was picked up senseless.—Pearson's Weekly.

A Family Affair.

It was at the information bureau—the place set apart for inquiries about wounded men in the various hospitals. In entered a particularly pretty girl and addressed the rather severe looking lady in charge. "I wish," she said, "to see Lieutenant Ernest Wagner. In what hospital is he?" "Lieutenant Wagner can receive visits only from his relatives." "I am his cousin." "And I am his mother."—New York Post.

Our First Paper Mill.

The first paper mill in America was established in 1690 at Roxbury, near Philadelphia. The second was erected in Germantown in 1710, and the third, founded in 1714 on Chester creek, in Delaware, was the source of Benjamin Franklin's supply.—Argonaut.

Always Smoking.

"Do you think smoking shortens life?" "I don't think so. Look at old Vesuvius."

When life ceases to be a promise it does not cease to be a task.—Amiel.

Film Picture Freaks.

Freak pictures are usually the result of clever manipulation of the camera or the film. Articles or individuals can be made to instantly disappear by stopping the camera while the article is removed or the person walks off the stage, the other characters holding their pose until the camera is again put in motion. In some films in which a person is thrown from a height or is apparently crushed under a steam roller the effect is gained by the live person walking away after the camera is stopped and a dummy substituted to undergo the death penalty.

By projecting the picture at a faster rate than it was taken excruciating comic scenes are sometimes devised. An automobile going ten miles an hour by speeding up the projection machine may be made to apparently move at 100 miles an hour, and by increasing the same way the apparent speed of persons dodging the demoniac auto exceedingly ludicrous effects are had.

By mechanical means in combining two or more negatives into one positive a man can be shown fencing with himself or even cutting his own head off.—Philadelphia Press.

Gold In Carats.

We often hear people in speaking of their watches say, "It is an 18 carat case." Others speak of 14 carat watches or 22 carat or solid gold rings. When you see the marks on a watch case or the inside of a gold ring they read 18 K. or 14 K., or whatever number of carats the maker wishes to indicate. A piece of gold jewelry marked 18 K., or 18 carats, means that it is three-fourths pure gold. In arranging this basis of marking things made of gold also lately pure gold is called 24 carats. Then if two, six or ten twenty-fourths of alloy have been added the amount of the alloy is deducted from twenty-four, and the result is either 22, 18 or 14 carats fine, and so on. On ordinary articles marked by jewelers the amount of pure gold used is seldom over 18 carats, or three-fourths. Wedding rings (and these are considered solid gold) are generally made 22 carats fine—that is, there are only two twenty-fourths parts of alloy in them.

Words.

Words are used for various purposes—to evade issues, to put people to sleep, to break up homes, to prevent literature and to conceal ideas. Nothing exceeds like words.

Words are used in speeches, debates and stories. Massed in series groups in newspapers and text books they prevent people from learning anything. Last words are most effective and are employed exclusively by women and prominent citizens who are dying.

Words are nothing in themselves, but only in their relationship to other words. It is the system of putting them together that counts. Most words are like unorganized militia. In war the mortality among them is fearful. They never win battles. When words are found in regular army style, however, disciplined and experienced, they are likely to be invincible.—Judge.

Where Women Don't Like to Shop.

The stranger in Korea finds that he has struck topsy turvydom when he learns that women do not like shopping, that the prominent merchants keep their wares concealed in closets instead of displaying them in show-cases and that the customer who does not fancy the first piece of goods brought from concealment is likely to be told that the merchant is quite sure he has nothing better. Elsewhere the street sign plays an important part in attracting trade. The large merchant houses in Korea are entirely without street signs.

Parsimony and Economy.

"Papa," said a child, "what is the difference between parsimony and economy?" "I will explain the difference by an example," the father replied. "If I cut down my own expenses that is economy, but if I cut down your mother's, then it is parsimony."

Fine Subject.

Madge—When you took the long walk with Dolly how did you find so much to talk about? Marjorie—We happened to pass a girl we both knew.—Judge.

Uncertain.

"I see you advertised for a cook yesterday. Did you get one?" "I don't know yet. I can tell better after dinner."

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Food Poisoning. The symptoms of food poisoning are usually those of severe cholera morbus—vomiting, diarrhea, pain in the abdomen, restlessness, prostration, headache and sometimes fever. Mild food poisoning is undoubtedly very common, and many cases of biliousness, indigestion or summer complaint are really of that nature. In all cases of real poisoning the first thing to do is to empty the stomach. Even though vomiting has already occurred, some of the poisonous material may be left, and only the artificial production of vomiting will remove it. After that the symptoms must be treated as they appear. The physician's chief concern must be to sustain the heart until the system has eliminated the poison and the attack is over.

NO LOOKING BACK IN GETTYSBURG.

New Evidence Constantly Being Published.

Since the long succession of Gettysburg reports were first published in the local press there has been no looking back. Gettysburg evidence continues to pour in, and—better still—those whose reports were first published many years ago, verify all they said in a most hearty and unmistakable way. Read the experience of Mrs. N. L. Wierman, 135 York St. She says:

"I suffered a great deal from backache and nervousness. I used Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at the People's Drug Store, and they helped me greatly. My nerves were strengthened and my back was greatly benefited. I gladly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to advise anyone troubled by nervousness or backache to try them."

The above statement was given on January 3, 1910 and on February 14, 1916, Mrs. Wierman said: "It hasn't been necessary for me to use Doan's Kidney Pills for some time. I am pleased to back up my past recommendation for them."

Price 50c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Wierman has twice publicly recommended. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

After suffering for some time from an epidemic of measles, the Board of Health of Abbottstown has lifted the quarantine restrictions from the Sunday schools and other public gatherings, the trouble being about stamped out.

ELY'S CREAM BALM has been tried and not found wanting in thousands of homes all over the country. It has won a place in the family medicine chest among the reliable household remedies, where it is kept at hand for use in treating cold in the head just as soon as some member of the household begins the preliminary sneezing or snuffling. It gives immediate relief and a day or two's treatment will put a stop to a cold which might, if not checked, become chronic and run into a bad case of catarrh. Advertisement.

PORK AND PORCELAIN.

And the Venus Shell of the Shores of the Mediterranean.

You remember the comment of the wag who declared that if fish should be served only on plates adorned with fishes and seaweed pork should be served only on porcelain. And you probably saw no connection whatever. It is remotely possible that the wag saw no connection, either—beyond the sound of the words.

Curiously enough, there is a deep inner connection between pork and porcelain, a connection that happens to drag in a certain kind of fish that was found on the shores of the Mediterranean. That fish was the Venus shell, and it inhabited a house more beautiful than any Italian palace. The top of the shell was oval and arched, and when it was covered with a fine gray seaweed the children who played along the shore called it "porcella," the little pig.

In time the Venus shell came to be known as the porcella, perhaps because the people who gathered the shells for their commercial value were more familiar with the pig than with the luminous goddess of love, whose radiance was supposed to be reflected in the iridescent house of the creature who dwelt in the sea from which Venus is said to have arisen.

The luster of that shell was well known all over Europe, and when a potter at Meissen succeeded in producing a glaze on earthenware that was very hard and luminous he called it "porcelain," because it resembled the shell of the "porcella." He was not thinking of "porco," the Italian hog, nor of "porca," his spouse, nor yet of "porcella," the little pig, but he gave his ware a name that ultimately suggests pork.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

SPARE HARMLESS SNAKES.

They Are Natural Foes of Many of the Farmers' Worst Pests.

Among the best although least appreciated friends of the farmer are the harmless snakes, such as the milk snake, the "chicken" snake, the garter snake, the bull snake, the blotched king snake, the blue snake, the black snake and some others. All of them are the natural enemies of rats, mice, weasels and similar animals that infest farms and village homes, especially where there is poultry or other small live stock.

In an article in the Scientific American Dr. Robert W. Shufeldt says that it would well repay every farmer in the country to keep half a dozen harmless vermin destroying snakes on every acre of his place.

Although most farmers believe that the common "chicken" snake haunts their outbuildings in order to feed on their young ducks and chickens, the snake does nothing of the kind, but it does destroy great numbers of young mice and other pests. Man's dread and hatred of snakes, says Dr. Shufeldt, have been from the earliest time a matter of erroneous teaching. Harmless snakes are the easiest animals in the world to tame, and it is high time that the false ideas about them should be corrected.

More than that, it should be taught that like birds, they are among the best friends that the farmer has. If we destroy them we pave the way for the destruction of our forests, our staple farm products and a good deal else that now and always has been protected by snakes and birds.

Bows to the People.

At the main entrance doors of the house of commons is still enacted a scene that recalls stern ceremonies of Elizabethan days. When the king's messenger, the black rod, approaches the house of commons the doors are closed and locked in his face. He must knock three times and bow three times with true humility to the common people; then and only then will the king's message be heard by the people's representatives in commons assembled. In such customs is indicated the inherent purpose of the house of commons to insist upon its full prerogative as the direct representative of the common people from which the creation of republics and democracies is made possible.—London Globe.

An Australian Mole.

The Australian mole burrows obliquely in the sand, going two or three inches under it and never betraying its passage except by a slight undulation of the soil. In digging it uses its conical nose, which is protected by a horny plate, and the strong, mattock shaped claws of its fore feet. The hind feet, which are wider and spade shaped, throw the sand back, so that no trace is left of the tunnel which it hollows. It comes to the surface a few yards farther on and then buries itself again, all without making any noise.

Legend of the Grand Canyon.

The Grand Canyon of the Colorado was first reported to the civilized world by the early Spanish explorers in 1540. The Indian legend of the Grand canyon is picturesque. There was a great chief who mourned the death of his wife and would not be comforted. To him came Ta-Vwouts, one of the Indian gods, and told him that his wife was in a happier land to which he would take him that he might see for himself if upon his return he would cease to mourn. The chief promised. Then Ta-Vwouts made a trail through the mountains that guarded that beautiful land. This trail was the canyon gorge of the Colorado. Through it Ta-Vwouts led the chief, and when they had returned the god exacted from the chief a promise that he would tell no one of its joys lest, through discontent with the circumstances of this world, others should desire to go there. Then Ta-Vwouts rolled a river into the gorge, a mad, raging stream, that should engulf any that might attempt to enter thereby. This river was the Colorado.

Animals We Never Met.

Dr. N. A. Cobb, an authority on zoology, declares that there must be hundreds of thousands of species of nematodes, or threadworms, more than nine-tenths of which are still unknown to science. Of the parasitic nematodes infesting vertebrate animals alone it is estimated that there are at least 80,000 species. Insects, mollusks, crustaceans and other animal groups are also much infested, and as a rule a given species of nematode is peculiar to a single species of host. Lastly, the species of nematode living free in soil and water vastly outnumber the parasitic species. As these creatures are enormously prolific, the number of individuals must be quite beyond conception. Dr. Cobb estimates that in the upper foot of an arable soil the number of nematodes runs to thousands of millions an acre.—Exchange.

Panama Canal Chains.

The huge locks of the Panama canal are guarded by massive chains stretched across the channel. No vessel can crash into the gates at any of the locks because of these fenders, placed seventy feet from each gate and near the surface of the water. If the chains are struck by a boat they gradually yield to the force, paying out to a certain distance, which depends upon the violence of the impact.

The mechanisms which regulate the chain fenders are installed on either wall. A system of hydraulic cylinders is used for raising and lowering the chains. The action of the fender when struck by a boat is modified in part by the friction produced in the machinery, but mainly by the resistance produced by water flowing through valves.—Popular Science Monthly.

Making "Central's" Job Easy.

It is much more important than most people think to give the name of the telephone exchange before the number instead of vice versa and to be extremely particular in sounding the consonants clearly in any conversation. Also it is necessary to distinguish carefully between 5 and 9 and to say "oh" for 0, instead of "naught," which is often mistaken for 4 and sometimes, curiously enough, for 8. All these are useful memoranda which deserve to be kept in mind as steadily as that duty of courtesy to the telephone girl which is, we fear, too often forgotten.—London Globe.

Gold Bells.

Gold and copper bells served as money among the peoples of Mexico and Central America before the time of the American Indian. The gold bells of Costa Rica are exquisite examples of metal work. Many of them are modeled in the form of birds, monkeys and grotesque heads.

The Opal.

The superstition against the opal began through the stonecutters, each of whom would anxiously ask every other if he had had any luck in his cutting, for the opal contains 13 per cent water and is exceedingly brittle and therefore difficult to cut successfully.

Bathing.
 Authorities may vary in discussing the merits of the hot bath, but they all agree in the abstract that bathing is necessary to good health. The removal of refuse matter is the primary reason for the bath.
 A bath should not be taken too near bedtime. There is a normal attraction of the blood toward the stomach after eating. Any interference with this and the attraction of the blood toward the surface of the body is apt to arrest digestion.
 Warm baths have a soothing effect and often are prescribed for nervousness. The tepid bath can do no harm. Cold baths are stimulating, but apt to be injurious if the heart action is not strong enough to permit of a ready reaction. To some individuals the shock to the nervous system is so great that they cannot accustom themselves to cold baths.

LIFE OF THE NARCISSUS.

A Plant That Teaches Us a Lesson in Patient Waiting.

Fifty weeks of saving for one or two of spending! Eleven months of living in darkness for one month of sunshine. Three hundred and fifty days as an ugly, brown, dirty bulb for fifteen days as a beautiful fragrant flower. If ever you want a lesson in patient waiting turn to the flower which is satisfied to remain obscure nearly all its life for the privilege of blooming for a few days—the narcissus.

The bulb existence of the narcissus is so much obscured that we forget all about how the flower is using it as a savings bank or a life insurance policy. What we think is a worthless, ugly clump in the earth is busy the year round storing up nourishment and strength to serve the flower during its blooming period.

If the bulb were not of a saving disposition there would be no blossoms. The flower in turn takes sunlight and oxygen and sends it into the bulb to store away for another period of blooming. It depends upon the bulb to conserve this strength, and the bulb's thrift never fails.

Don't make the mistake of calling the bulb the root. In reality the bulb is the stem of the flower, made out of a cluster of thick leaves. Planted in the earth the bulb sends down roots, which seize fast to the soil and drag the parent bulb down with them.—Philadelphia North American.

SPAIN'S ROYAL MAUSOLEUM.

The Escorial Is Also a Palace, a Monastery and a Church.

Twenty-seven miles from Madrid on a bleak hill surrounded by a sterile and gloomy wilderness stands the Escorial, one of the most remarkable buildings in Europe. It is 786 feet long and 623 feet wide, with tall towers at the angles. It comprises at once a monastery, a church, a palace and a mausoleum.

On Aug. 10, 1557, the Spaniards gained a great victory over the French at St. Quentin, and the Spanish king, Philip II., had the building erected in commemoration of the event. As the battle occurred on St. Laurence's day, he had the building designed to resemble the famous gridiron on which St. Laurence suffered martyrdom by being roasted to death.

The work was begun in 1563 and continued for more than twenty years. The building contains a vast number of treasures—paintings, sculptures, manuscripts, etc. Among them is a life size figure of Christ on the cross done in ivory by Benvenuto Cellini.

As it stands today the Escorial and its contents represent an outlay of more than $10,000,000. Here lie the bodies of all the Spanish kings since the Emperor Charles V., except Philip V. and Ferdinand VI.—Argonaut.

The Original Paul Pry.

Thomas Hill, familiarly called Tommy Hill, was, says Dr. Brewer, the original Paul Pry. It was from him also that Theodore Hook drew his character of Gilbert Gurney. Planché in his "Recollections" says of Hill: "His specialty was the accurate information he could impart on all the petty details of the domestic economy of his friends, the contents of their wardrobes, their pantries, the number of pots of preserves in their store closets and of the table napkins in their linen presses, the dates of their births and marriages, the amounts of their tradesmen's bills and whether paid weekly or quarterly. He had been on the press and was connected with the Morning Chronicle. He used to drive Matthews crazy by ferreting out his whereabouts when he left London and popping the information in some paper."

The Helmet That Fell.

Roque-laure, the deformed jester of Louis XIV., contrived to get out of many a scrape by his ready wit. One day he went to the king to ask his pardon for having struck off the helmet of one of his sentinels who had failed to give him the military salute. Louis, who knew his man, wondered that Roque-laure should crave his pardon for so venial an offense and said to him: "This is a serious matter, Roque-laure, but I will pardon you this time." It afterward turned out that the soldier's head was in the helmet and fell with it to the ground.

The Blushing Brides.

"Why are brides generally expected to be blushing as they walk down the aisle?"

Miss Hitty's Discovery

A Story of the "Movies"

By CLARISSA MACKIE

In the village of Edgewood were many straitlaced persons. To visit that town and become acquainted with the inhabitants was like going back a century, when the theater, playing cards and all manner of amusements were considered wicked. There is a story of a man who paved the way for the enjoyment of the game of billiards in the God fearing town of Philadelphia during the early part of the last century. He said that marbles were not considered wicked—why billiards? Marbles were stone, while billiard balls were ivory. Marbles were shot by the hand, billiard balls by a stick. Marbles were played on the sidewalk out of doors, while billiards were played on a level bed in the house. Where in lay the difference?

The good people of the Quaker City, whose children could not be prevented from playing marbles, concluded after this discovery had been made that billiards were no more sinful and with drew their opposition, and thereafter billiards became fashionable.

It was the fate of Miss Hitty to make a similar discovery in Edgewood. Miss Hitty met Dick Hedges at a church social. Had she not met him at a church social she would probably never have met him at all, for dancing was frowned upon in Edgewood, and without dancing young people's parties are considered dull. The consequence was that, no one caring to go to the trouble of getting up a party that was sure to be dull, parties were not given.

But it would have made no difference where these two happened to meet, for at once both recognized that they were made for each other, and after that they provided their own places of meeting, and very soon they were engaged. Unfortunately Hedges was poor and but one opening appeared for him: that was a position in an American tea house in China. Dick availed himself of it and tore himself away from his betrothed. Weeks, months, even years, passed, and he did not return.

When the Palace movie theater opened its doors in Edgewood the house of entertainment was looked upon with disapproval by the church members.

At first many of them declined to even penetrate the mysteries beyond the white painted doors and the many posters outside, but gradually one by one the villagers were lured inside until the venture promised to be a profitable one. Even the ministers of the different churches visited the theater from time to time to censor the plays, but on the whole it was decided that it was a harmless diversion.

After Miss Hitty Morton made her important discovery Edgewood took the Palace theater to its heart.

Every one knew that Hitty Morton would have been married long ago if Dick Hedges had ever returned from his long voyage to China. But Dick had never returned, and it was believed that he had died. One by one his family had died or moved away from Edgewood until there remained only his old sweetheart, Hitty Morton who lived on Honeyscot road, in a little red cottage near the bay. Some people whispered that Dick had been faithless to Hitty.

The first time Hitty entered the walls of the Palace she was bewildered by the crowd of silent people, the flashing pictures on the screen, the novelty of it all, for she had never been in a theater in all her simple life.

But the screen pictures laid their magic spell upon her, and she became a devotee of the movies. Twice a week as regularly as the program was changed Hitty Morton could be found sitting in the same seat halfway down the room, her bright eyes eagerly following the stories told by the screen.

Deacon Peddie, who passed the collection plate in church, always scrutinized Hitty's contribution to detect whether or not she was enjoying the semiweekly amusement at the expense of the church, but invariably Hitty's silver dime would drop into the plate. Perhaps Hime Payton, the butcher, might have told another story—that Hitty was skimping on her food. She was eating meat only twice a week now instead of three times.

One night in particular the posters were more alluring than ever. There had been a change of program that day, but there was a missionary meeting, and Hitty had postponed her going to the following night. Now she paused in front of the brightly lighted entrance and studied the colored posters. "All For Love." That sounded thrilling, with a rescue at sea. Pictures of the sea always attracted her.

"Visits to Strange Lands." Hitty thrilled with anticipated pleasure, for she dearly loved these travel pictures, giving glimpses of strange lands and strange people, perhaps the countries that Dick Hedges had visited. He used to say that when he got a vessel of his own he would take her with him to the far east. Hitty still lived these voyages in her day dreams.

She glanced up and down the village street.

Yonder was the church. The basement was brightly lighted, for there was to be a missionary barrel packed that night. In Hitty's arms were half a dozen white shirts she had stitched for some unknown missionary in Asia. She was expected to help pack the barrel.

Before her were the alluring posters. Hitty glanced once up and down the street and then disappeared through the swinging doors. She did not know that Mrs. Deacon Peddie, passing on the other side of the street, had glimpsed her backsliding sister and was even now detailing the circumstances to a shocked group of listeners about the missionary barrel.

Hitty found her accustomed seat, and being rather short in stature she sat down on the bundle of shirts and so did not miss a thing all evening.

The sweet romance of "All For Love" was slowly recited off to the sentimental rapture of the very young and a few lonely souls like our own Miss Hitty. She sat through it all, her round, sweet little face uplifted to the screen, with a look of wistfulness that a newcomer saw as he sat down nearby.

If any one had been interested it might have been noticed that the bronzed newcomer divided his interest between the pictures and Hitty Morton's face. After awhile the seat beside Hitty became vacant and in the darkened theater the stranger glided across the aisle and occupied it. Hitty never even turned her eyes from the screen; she was accustomed to this change of neighbors.

On the screen appeared the first of the travel pictures, which were Hitty's delight.

A great steamer was sailing from San Francisco for Japan. She felt herself one of that group of travelers hurrying up the gangplank of the great liner.

The scene shifted to the first port of call, Honolulu. Dark eyed maidens with garlands of flowers about their necks and other garlands for sale, queer vehicles, a swift view of a volcano, then aboard the steamer. A glimpse of the social life on board, then the approach to the fairy islands of Japan.

Breathlessly Hitty watched the shifting scenes, fascinated by the oriental sights. She almost thought herself there with Dick, as she had dreamed. While she watched she turned a little worn ring on her engagement finger. Any woman in Edgewood would have told you that it was Hitty Morton's engagement ring.

The man beside her glimpsed the ring, and his face grew pale. At last the steamer approached the yellow shore line of China. Then she dropped anchor off Wusung, in the mouth of the Yangtze river, and transferred her passengers to the small tugs which were to convey them up the shallow tidal river called Whangpo to the city of Shanghai.

When the picture of the public wharf at Shanghai was thrown upon the screen Hitty leaned forward. She wanted to scream.

There in the crowd of eager faces watching the arriving passengers was a familiar one—the face of Dick Hedges, grown older, perhaps, but Dick Hedges, nevertheless, smooth shaven, with a captain's uniform on his broad shoulders and a gold laced cap on his handsome head.

It was Dick—Dick Hedges, her Dick in faraway Shanghai!

The much unlabeled moving picture screen had shown her that he was alive!

"Dick! Dick! Oh, Dick!" she whispered sobbily.

A strong, warm hand covered hers, and the man beside her looked down out of Dick Hedges' eyes. He wore a captain's uniform, and in his other hand was a gold laced cap.

"Dick!" Hitty thought she screamed the word, but it did not leave her lips. "Easy, lass; easy, lass!" he whispered gently, and then while the screen displayed further pictures of these far countries Hitty saw no more. Was not life unending for her a greater romance than could be depicted on a screen? Had not the sea given up its dead?

Dick whispered the meager details of his story. He had been lost at sea and then rescued, and when he had returned to civilization some one from Edgewood had maliciously told him that Hitty Morton had forgotten him and was married to another man.

Only a little while ago had Dick heard that Hitty was still unmarried, and so he had returned to Edgewood to ascertain if she still cared for him. He had dropped into the theater and glimpsed her face. He sat beside her and saw that she wore his ring alone upon her third finger. He had seen her face when his own picture—taken unknown to himself—had leaped out of the crowd upon the wharf in Shanghai. He had heard her murmured words, her unconscious cry of joy at seeing him.

"Then I knew that you still loved me and that I was not too late," he whispered as they followed the crowd outside. "My ship sails from San Francisco on the 21st. Hitty, so we must be married at once so that we can start on our honeymoon voyage. You remember how we planned it, eh?"

Of course Hitty remembered. They walked along in happy conversation, the package of shirts tucked under Dick's free arm.

Mrs. Deacon Peddie and a group of missionary ladies overtook Hitty Morton and brought her to a realization of her sins.

"Hitty Morton! Where are those missionary shirts?" demanded Mrs. Peddie. "We're holding the barrel open till morning so's they can be put in."

Hitty took the package from Dick's grasp, but he snatched it back again. "If these are shirts, men's size," he said genially, "I guess I'm the missionary they'll about fit. I want 'em for my trousers. Hitty and I'm going to be married in a day or so."

WELL KNOWN WAR VETERAN

PASSES AWAY THE DAY AFTER MEMORIAL DAY.

Craig B. Shields, a Member of Cole's Cavalry Answers the Roll Call.

Craig Buchanan Shields died at his home Wednesday afternoon, after a short illness aged 72 years, 9 months and 7 days. About two weeks ago Mr. Shields had a hemorrhage that greatly weakened him and he had been confined to his bed. He was growing stronger when a second attack came the day after Memorial day and carried him off. Mr. Shields was a son of Mr. and Mrs. George Shields, being born at York Springs and in early manhood came to Gettysburg where he since lived. He was a painter and followed carriage painting when that business flourished here and later engaged in general house painting work. He was janitor at the High Street public school building for twenty years and gave up the position about twelve years ago on account of failing health. While janitor Mr. Shields became the friend of many school children who always had a warm spot in their hearts for him. During the Civil War Mr. Shields served two years and nine months in Company C of Cole's Cavalry and the day before his death enjoyed a visit from an old comrade friend, James A. Scott, of Washington, D. C. He was a member of Corbett's Post No. 9, G. A. R.

He leaves a wife who was Miss Mary Agnes McKelvey of Frederick County, Maryland, one son and four daughters, George E. Shields, Misses Zora and Bessie Shields, at home, Miss Jane Shields of Harrisburg and Mrs. C. A. Willis of White Hall, New York. Two sisters survive, Mrs. George French, of Amsterdam, New York and Miss Alice Shields of Mt. Airy, N. C.

The funeral will be held Saturday morning from the house at 10:30 services will be conducted by the Rev. F. E. Taylor, his pastor, with interment in Evergreen cemetery. The services at the grave will be in charge of the Grand Army.

Rev. McClain Davis, a graduate of Gettysburg college, died at the Presbyterian hospital, Philadelphia on Monday following an illness of ten weeks from pneumonia. Mr. Davis was graduated from Gettysburg college in 1911 and spent two years in the theological seminary here. He later went to Hartford Seminary, Hartford, Connecticut, where he completed his ministerial studies. He has been pastor of the Lutheran church at Lansdowne, Mr. Davis was a member of the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity. He took a prominent part in oratorical activities at the college here. He taught a class in St. James church and was a member of the Christian Endeavor society. Both of these organizations sent floral tributes to Lansdowne. He leaves his mother, his wife, one sister and three brothers. Funeral services were held at his Lansdowne home by Rev. J. B. Baker, pastor of St. James church. Further services were held at Williamsport Friday afternoon where interment was made.

David Trimmer, a son of the late Isaac and Elizabeth Trimmer, of East Berlin, died at his home in Taneytown on last Wednesday in his 72nd year. He leaves a widow, seven daughters and two sons.

David Beard, a well-known farmer, of Liberty township, died Wednesday, May 24th aged 79 years. He had been almost blind for several years. He is survived by a daughter, Miss Laura and one son, Howard, also by one brother, George Beard, Waynesboro. The funeral services were held last Saturday afternoon by Rev. C. R. W. D. D. Interment being made in Fairview cemetery.

James Oliver Sanders died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. John Staller, of Fairview, on Tuesday, May 23rd aged 82 years. He leaves two daughters and two sons, Mrs. Sarah C. Staller, of Fairview, Mrs. Mary Staller, of Fairview, Mr. John Sanders, of Fairview, and Mr. James Sanders, of Fairview.

Mrs. Elizabeth L. ... died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Staller, of Fairview, on Tuesday, May 23rd aged 82 years. She leaves two daughters and two sons, Mrs. Sarah C. Staller, of Fairview, Mrs. Mary Staller, of Fairview, Mr. John Sanders, of Fairview, and Mr. James Sanders, of Fairview.

NEW YORK GUARDSMEN

Twenty eight officers of the National Guard of New York State arrived in Gettysburg Sunday for the purpose of studying the tactical features of the battle. They are members of a field officers' school which is conducted through the winter by the military establishment of that state. During the past winter they have been engaged in working out problems in connection with the operations of the armies in the Gettysburg and Antietam campaigns and their visit to the scene is for the purpose of verifying the correctness of their work. They left town Tuesday evening.

PUBLIC SALE

Valuable Manufacturing Plant and Premises.

Saturday, June 10, 1916.

The undersigned, administrator of the estate of Charles P. Ketterer, late of the City of New York, deceased, acting under and in pursuance of a decree of the Orphans' Court of York county, will after at public sale, on the day above mentioned at 2 o'clock p. m. on the premises, all the right, title and interest of the said Charles P. Ketterer, deceased in and to all the following described real estate and manufacturing plant, formerly known as the Ketterer Wagon Works and now occupied by the Hopkins Manufacturing Company, situated in what is known as the West End of Hanover, partly in York and partly in Adams county, Pennsylvania; the same consisting of two tracts of land, more particularly described as follows:

TRACT NO. 1.—All that tract, piece and parcel of land situate partly in Adams county, and partly in York county, State of Pennsylvania, bounded and described as follows: Beginning for a corner at a stake at line of lands of John Herr and the Western Maryland railroad; thence west thirty-three (33) feet to a stake; thence north fifteen (15) feet to a stake; thence east thirty-three (33) feet to a stake at lands of the Western Maryland railroad; thence south along the lands of the Western Maryland railroad fifteen (15) feet to the place of beginning. Together with any and all easement and appurtenances thereto belonging.

TRACT NO. 2.—All that piece, parcel and lots of ground situate, lying and being partly in Conewago township, Adams county, and partly in Penn township, York county, State of Pennsylvania, bounded and described as follows, to wit:

Lots Nos. nine (9) to sixteen (16) inclusive, on Block No. 23; Lots Nos. one (1) to eighteen (18) inclusive, on Block No. 21, and Lots Nos. one (1) to nine (9) inclusive, on Block No. 25, as the same has heretofore been surveyed and laid out by E. M. Kenby, C. E., and known on the plat thereof by the numbers above mentioned—bounded by lands of Western Maryland railroad, Elm avenue, the alley running north and south in Block 23, and alley running east and west in Block Nos. 23, 24, and 25. Together with any and all easements and appurtenances thereto belonging.

Tract No. 1, above described, includes a large and copious spring of water, which is piped to Tract No. 2, and used in the operation of the plant. Tract No. 2 is improved by a three (3) story brick factory, with large elevator and shafting installed therein; there is also on Tract No. 2 a one story brick boiler and engine room with boiler and engine installed and in excellent working condition. On this tract there is also a one-story frame shop for wood-workers and frame lumber shed. The property as a whole is in excellent condition and is splendidly located for manufacturing purposes. It has a railroad siding on the Western Maryland railroad, along the entire one side.

The above property will be sold subject to a lease now held by the Hopkins Manufacturing Company, which will expire on the first day of April, 1919.

TERMS.—The terms of this sale will be 25 per cent. cash on the day of sale; the balance to be paid in three (3) months from the date of sale.

JOHN A. HOOBER, Esq.,
Administrator of the estate of Charles P. Ketterer, deceased.

Housework NEED NOT be hard work

These days there is no need of a woman ruining her health and her temper standing over a range in a kitchen that's little short of an inferno.

No, indeed, when for a very few dollars, her dealer can sell her a New Perfection Oil Cook Stove. For with a Perfection cooking becomes interesting—a pleasure. All the monotony, the drudgery and the hardship disappear.

Where there's a Perfection there's no tiresome waiting for the oven to get right for cake-baking. For just before the batter is mixed, light the burner that heats the oven; in almost a jiffy the oven will be ready—ready to bake a cake that will do anyone proud.

In place of paper, wood and coal, a

Perfection burns the cheapest of fuels—kerosene, and very little of that.

Because of a Perfection with its fireless cooker, its separate oven, its improved long-lasting wick, your work will be lighter, your cooking better.

Be careful of your kerosene. Get Atlantic Rayolight Oil. For there is as much difference between kerosenes as there is between milks.

Just as one milk is rich in cream and another is watery, so some kerosenes will sputter, spurt and smoke, but Rayolight burns down to the last drop without smoke or smell, but with an intense and a cheap heat.

So ask for Atlantic Rayolight Oil by name. At all dealers who display this sign:

Dry Goods Department Store

The large quantity of goods we handle gives us a buying prestige enjoyed by but few stores outside of the large cities. By anticipating our requirements months ahead we are in a position, especially in the past year, to give our customers the Utmost Protection against advancing prices about which you have heard so much for some months.

We own nearly our entire stock of goods under contracts made during 1915, or at prices ruling then. For instance, in our Rug & Carpet Department we are able to sell them at or nearly at the prices ruling at the mills today.

The same is true of many otherlines, notably—Silks and Wool Dress Goods, Cotton Wash Fabrics of every character and many lines of Ready to Wear Goods.

So to the Service and Dependableness of our merchandise which we offer at all times we can add now, especially, Lower Prices on almost all lines than many other stores.

Forty-one Years of Telephone Progress

The faint musical sound of a plucked spring was electrically carried from one room to another and recognized on June 2, 1875. That sound was the birth cry of the telephone.

The original instrument—the very first telephone in the world—is shown in the picture above.

From this new historic instrument has been developed an art of profound importance in the world's civilization.

At this time, when the Bell System is celebrating its forty-first anniversary, it is fitting to look back at its early days and give a true account of its development.

It has provided a system of communication adequate to public needs and sufficiently in advance of existing conditions to meet all private demands or national emergencies.

It has made the telephone the most economical servant of the people for social and commercial intercourse.

It has organized an operating staff loyal to public interests and ideals; and by its policy of service it has won the approval and good will of the people.

With these things in mind, the Bell System feels proud with confidence in a future of greater opportunity and greater achievement.

The Bell System.

GOOD ROADS and HOW TO GET THEM

Learning by Experience

It is significant that in those states where improved road building has reached its highest development, we find the greatest mileage of asphalt highways.

In states where road building is comparatively new or at least has not made great progress, we are likely to find roads that cost more than first-class asphalt construction—and yet do not turn out so well either for the taxpayer or the road user.

Of course we are not under any obligation to copy the methods of other states. But it would be foolish to ignore the teachings of their experience.

Massachusetts is conceded to be the leader in road building. The old Commonwealth had the first highway department, and some of her highway officials have been in office for 15 years. They are building roads now on the basis of experience—not guesswork. And their roads are costing less to build and less to maintain than our hard surface roads.

Massachusetts Knows How.

Massachusetts has found out how to construct asphalt macadam highways that will carry the heaviest road traffic to the United States.

Massachusetts' methods are simple and any one can duplicate her results with a little care. Wherever in this state there is a particularly heavy-traffic road to be built but one form of construction is followed. This is asphalt macadam built with hard stone and asphalt from the Bermudez lake of Venezuela. One example of such construction is the Revere-Saugus turnpike, which ranks as the heaviest traveled road in the state. The report of the Massachusetts Highway Commission says that this turnpike "probably receives more varied and extensive traffic than any other in the state." It was resurfaced with Bermudez asphalt macadam in 1910, and two years later the report of the Commission stated that "this road is now in first class condition and should remain for several years with very little expense for maintenance." Practically all of the main traveled roads around Boston are the same form of construction—that is, asphalt macadam or penetration roads.

The same condition is found around New York City. By far the heaviest out-of-town traffic is that on the main roads of Long Island, over which besides pleasure vehicles passes an end less stream of heavy horse and motor trucks bringing to the city the farm products on which New York largely subsists.

Heavy Traffic Roads of New York.

Some Long Island roads get a 24 hour traffic because the market gardeners haul their products into town at night. This is true of the Jericho Turnpike and the Merrick road, on both of which we find the same type of asphalt macadam that has stood the test for years in Massachusetts.

Cook County, Illinois, Lake County, Indiana, Lucas County, Ohio have all taken advantage of the lessons to be learned in road building from Massachusetts, and these and scores of other communities are convinced that the most road service for the money spent is to be obtained from asphalt macadam roadways.

TYPE OF ASPHALT ROAD THAT HAS MADE MASSACHUSETTS FAMOUS.

"As a young lady," he said, "I had made four typists, but I don't know, say I admire your typist."

"How funny," she said, "I thought we are so different, but I don't know, say I admire your typist."

The Silver Fox.
The silver fox is really a black fox instead, as some persons suppose, of being almost white or a silver gray. The name is given on account of the presence of silvery white and grayish hairs which appear among the black. In the better grades the long silky brush has a tip of pure white. About a quarter of a century ago the fifth animal, which weighs when full grown only about twelve pounds, became almost extinct. Because of the beauty of its fur the species was brought in till almost the last of them had disappeared. For a long time the standard price offered by the Hudson Bay company for silver fox pelts was about $1,000, and the price of the Fox Canadian, half breeds and half trappers to obtain this sum, to their fortune, can be better imagined than described.
